Mike,

For clarification, you are saying that the state of LA does not require a permit, however, they do require registration of monitoring wells and piezometers, correct?

I have attached your previous email for reference.

Thanks,
Chris

Subject: LDEQ monitoring well requirements

Good morning,

I have confirmed that LDEQ does not permit piezometers or monitoring wells. LDEQ does have a guidance document on constructing wells, but no permitting process or regulations. The guidance document is below, but I think we had a copy already.

Here are the forms for registering new monitoring wells and piezometers in Louisiana, and a link to the regs. I spoke with LDNR again today and confirmed the piezometers, not just wells, will have to be registered with them. I am checking with LDEQ as to whether they are involved in this too.

Michael,

I have attached our GW-1S form, which is the form that you register the monitoring wells on. Please remember to include the Section, Township, Range, and Quad number. I have also attached the GW-2 form, which is the form that you fill out when you plug and abandon the water well.

I can attach our Title 56 regulations on constructing the water well, but it is a large file and I didn't know if you would be able to accept it. You can find Title 56 at the following link: <http://doa.louisiana.gov/osr/lac/books.htm>
Scroll down the page and you will find the link to Title 56 public works.

Depending on the type of monitoring wells DEQ, does require a permit be obtained and they will also do an inspection of the constructed monitoring well. I am including these two links to their website that should help you decide if you have to go through their agency also. <http://deq.state.la.us/portal/PROGRAMS/Water.aspx>

If you have any questions or need assistance please feel e-mail or give me a call.

Thanks
